SHADE FOR CHICKENS

Many Chicks Are Victims of Sunstroke or Apoplexy.

Usually Formed by Trees and Bushes, Permitting Free Movement of Alr.

Chickens are probably less well able to stand the extremes of heat than any of our domestic animals, because they do not sweat to any great extent, hence are deprived of that safety valve that all of the domesticated animals possess. It is undoubtedly true that the chicken's comb and wattles serve to cool off its blood to a very marked degree, but even they will not avail in very hot weather and shade of some kind must be always available. This is especially true with baby first of the week. chicks, as they cannot stand the direct rays of the summer sun nearly chicks are victims of sunstroke or guest this week her mother. apoplexy every year, and it is usually Mrs. Harris, of Easley. the strongest and best developed ones

Natural shade is best of all because t is usually formed by trees and high bushes, sufficiently distant from the ground to permit free movement of air and the sun can get around to disinfect the ground at certain times. By all means have your hen coops, brooders and colony coops located in the shade during the middle of the day.

If there is no shade available in the yard where the baby chicks run, it will be necessary to provide some. A mighty good scheme is to build a frame about two feet off the ground and cover it with four inches of sod or a foot of straw, weighted down. This heavy thick roof prevents the face and is quite waterproof, thus having the advantage of boards or

and dusting themselves. With the older chickens, the problem is fully as serious and shade must be provided. This is sometimes done a couple of feet above the ground, but this plan is objectionable because of its cost and the fact that the hens lay in this scratching compart ment and rats harbor there. An orchard forms the very best location for the chicken park, as the trees furnish shade and damaged or decayed fruit, while the hens eat the tree insects and enrich the soil. For the backyard flock of hens, either sun-flowers or sweet corn will provide plenty of shade if planted thickly

The hen house is usually of little value for shade within, because the roof is too low and the breeze cannot blow directly through. If cross ventilation is provided and there is an air space or straw loft under the roof, little outside shade needs to be provided. Wherever possible, have the house so located that there is room for the chickens to get in the shade on any side of it, out of doors.
